OSHA and Young Workers: DOL blog focuses on preventing injuries and illnesses among young workers

OSHA Assistant Secretary David Michaels addressed America's young workers in a May 17 post on the Department of Labor blog site explaining their importance to our country's economy and OSHA's role in protecting them from workplace hazards. He said OSHA is reaching out to young workers because they are often more at risk of suffering an injury or an illness on the job than other workers due to their inexperience operating equipment, eagerness to please employers, or reluctance to speak up about dangerous work conditions. OSHA's Young Workers Web page provides information about workers' rights, work hour restrictions and prohibited jobs, as well as hazards related to common summer jobs such as landscaping, lifeguarding, and working in restaurants, parks and camps, or on farms.

Market Report

Current Market:

Let us just share with you some of the comments we have been reading in the industry behind the scenes:

"Framing lumber in the U.S. and Canadian markets remain stuck in a rut." "Mills fielded more inquiries, but the market remained weak."

"Another week of slow sales left many traders jaded."

All of us in this business have found ourselves to be in position that we expect badnews and when we hear good news it is a surprise. New home supplies will have to reach reasonable levels before new home construction picks up again. We all wake up every day striving to make today more successful than yesterday and talk about times of the past. Now is the time to give thanks for opportunities no matter the size and become comfortable with the new normal.
